

UBER EXPEDITIONARY ANALYSIS

1. INTRODUCTION

1.1 Overview

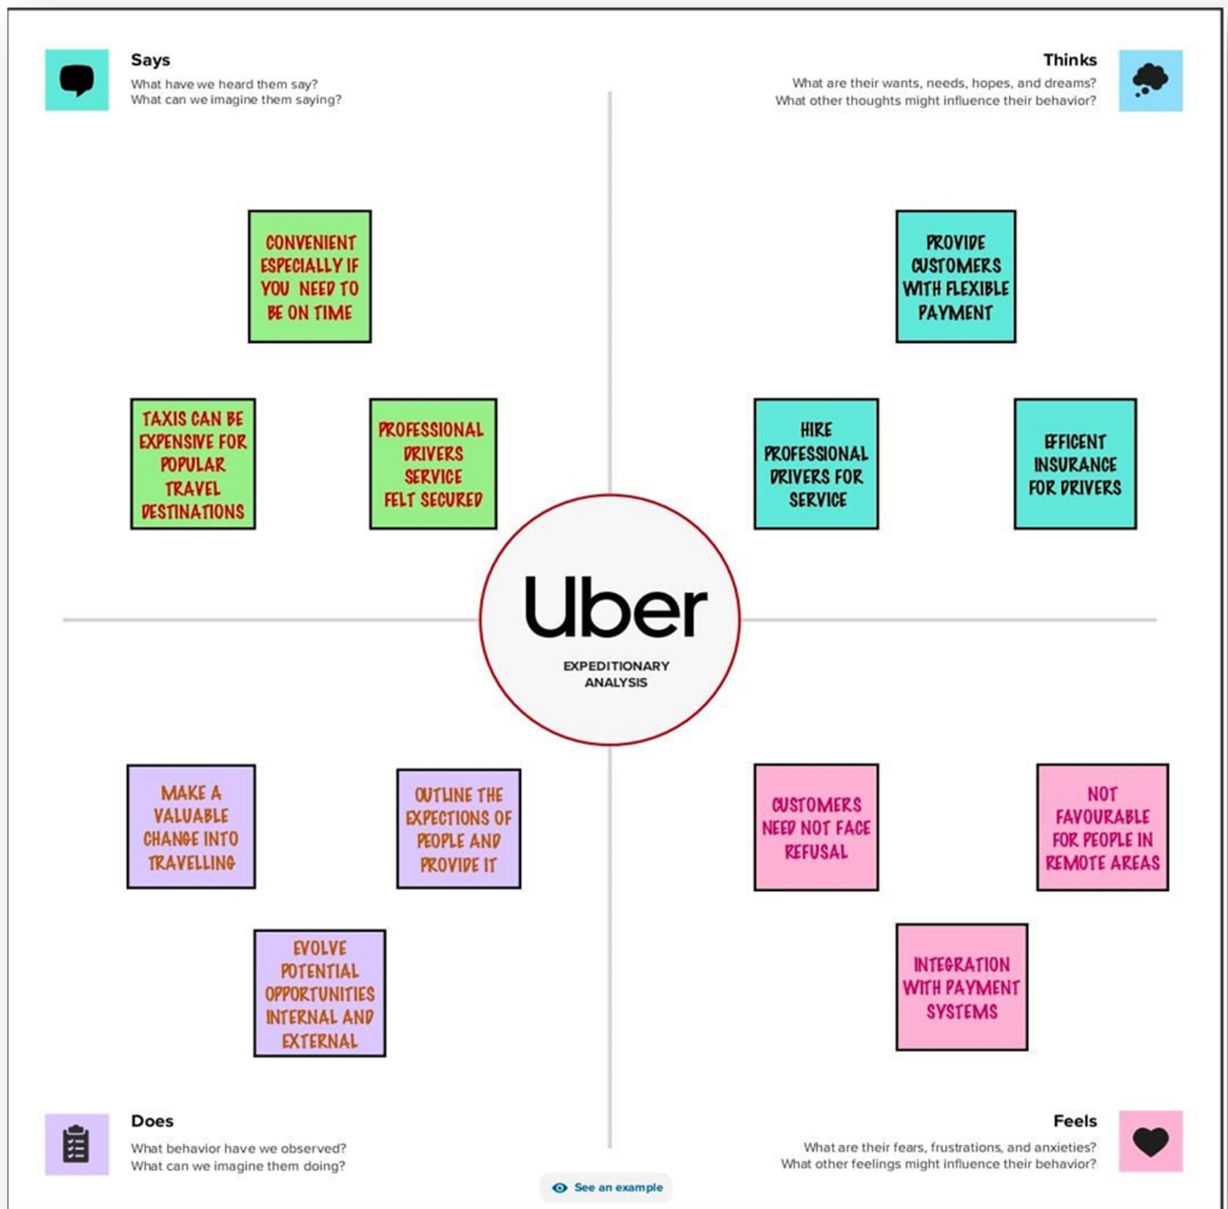

We live in a sharing economy, an economic model that allows individuals to acquire goods and services and provide them to one another. This includes everything from access to capital, data, fashion, employment, and even transportation. The latter is commonly referred to as ride-sharing, but you probably know it better by one of the major players in that industry: Uber Technologies. According to Uber, some 3.9 million people work as drivers in 63 different countries, completing roughly 14 million trips every day. Those figures date from 2018, though; by some estimates, the number of drivers hit 5 million in 2020, with 18.7 million trips completed each day. Many people become drivers to make a few extra dollars, while others drive on a full-time basis. Perhaps you have thought of signing up. Here's what you need to know about what is required to become a successful driver. To start with, you'll need a car and access to a smartphone, which allows you to connect with paying passengers. But that's not all. Keep reading to find out what it takes to become an Uber driver and to learn other important details, such as your earning potential and the tax treatment for your income as a driver. All Uber drivers must meet requirements regarding age, driver's license status, and driving experience. You'll need to pass a driver screening, which includes a review of your driving history and criminal record, and provide proof of residency, along with proof of auto insurance and car registration. Your car will need to meet certain requirements relating to age, size, and condition. The type of car insurance coverage that you'll need varies by state. Uber does offer coverage, but it's limited to only when the driver is logged in to the app and driving customers. Uber drivers are considered independent contractors, which means that you'll have to set aside money for income taxes, Social Security, and Medicare. Minimum Requirements to Become an Uber Driver Before you get too invested in the Uber process, start by filling out the application on Uber's website. 5.APPLICATIONS

Uber's mission is transportation as reliable as running water, everywhere, for everyone. To make that possible, we create and work with complex data. Then we bundle it up neatly as a platform that enables drivers to get business and riders to get around.

6. CONCLUSION

Uber is the company with a complicated history. Still, its founders had made something that was impossible: they survived sabotages, strikes, and discontents of the governments of different countries around the whole world. The necessity to provide people with good services at affordable prices is urgent nowadays. Not all people are able to use the quality they want. Uber opens new perspectives and possibilities. In general, the example offered by Uber can be used by many developing companies. Nowadays, it is not a difficult task to create an organization and introduce some new, unusual services. However, it is always challenging to gain a good reputation, prove the quality of the services, and create appropriate working conditions.

7. FUTURE SCOPE

The company expects by 2021, around 539.49 million users will use its taxi services. The tremendous success of Uber can be attributed to its simple and unique business model and its ability to offer an easy cab booking experience to customers with diverse transportation needs. Uber's location based cab and ride sharing app offers useful features for the passengers like pick up and destination address, taxi arrival estimated time, real-time cab tracking, automated e-receipts, SOS, driver details, ratings and reviews and multiple payment options. Similarly, its app offers various useful features for the drivers and admin.
